Major Success as “Operation Hawk” Clamps Down On Travelling Criminals

More than 80 vehicles were stop-checked and 13 people arrested during a major North Yorkshire Police operation to tackle rural and cross-border crime. The hard-hitting crackdown on travelling criminals saw dozens of officers take to the roads in the Scarborough and Ryedale areas.

From 3pm on 12 February through to 3am today, Operation Hawk patrols stopped and checked 83 vehicles, issued eight Fixed Penalty Notices and a Cannabis Warning, and seized one uninsured vehicle.

Cannabis, MCat and cash were also recovered as a series of warrants were executed across the area. In total, Operation Hawk officers made 13 arrests – nine in Scarborough and Ryedale – and also assisted with road traffic collisions and the search for a missing person. Valuable intelligence on rural crime was also shared with local Watch volunteers.

Operation Hawk is our campaign to tackle rural and cross-border crime, and is already showing results: there were 5,709 incidents of rural crime in North Yorkshire in 2014, down from 6,341 in 2013.

Assistant Chief Constable Paul Kennedy, who leads on Operation Hawk, said: “We launched Operation Hawk to send a clear message to travelling criminals – if you come to North Yorkshire to commit crime, we will catch you. Our area is one of the safest places in the country, and we are determined to keep it that way – so we will keep up the tough stance shown by Operation Hawk. Rural communities can be reassured that these operations will continue until travelling criminals get the message that they are not welcome in North Yorkshire.”

Members of the public can help Operation Hawk by reporting any suspicious people or activity. Please call North Yorkshire Police on 101 – select option 1 – and speak to the Force Control Room. If an emergency response is required, always dial 999. Information can also be passed on without giving your name by contacting Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

Quad Bikes

The below has been received from North Yorkshire Police and whilst it refers to incidents in that police area the crime prevention advice can be reflected anywhere in the country.

Quad bikes are regularly being stolen. Crime prevention starts at "home" with you. You have to invest in security to prevent theft.

Rural Residents Urged: "protect your quad bikes"

Quad bike owners are being urged to take extra steps to protect their vehicles, after a number of thefts in the Selby area in recent months.

Three quad bikes have been stolen from rural parts of Selby district in the last four months, in Camblesforth, Church Fenton and Escrick. Quad bikes have also been taken from rural areas elsewhere in the county, including Kirkbymoorside and Whitby, over the same period.

Now the local Safer Neighbourhood Team is calling on quad bike owners to ensure that they do everything possible to make life hard for rural criminals.

Sergeant Chris Jones, of Selby Police, said: “North Yorkshire is a very safe place, but unfortunately quad bikes, plant and other farm machinery are attractive targets for travelling criminals. While I don’t want rural residents to be unnecessarily concerned, I do want them to take basic crime prevention measures to keep their valuable property safe.”

People are urged to:

- Avoid leaving quad bikes running unattended

19th February 2015

- Consider property identification – many quad bikes are unregistered and therefore not easily identifiable
- Report suspicious people and vehicles loitering near isolated rural properties
- Install adequate lighting, CCTV and strong locks to deter offenders

Many readers will be members of the British Horse Society (BHS) and may have already seen the below message from the organisation.

Please forward the information to others who you may feel will benefit from reading it.

General Election 2015: The Manifesto for The Horse

As political parties develop their manifestos for the 2015 General Election, this is the precise moment for horse owners and riders to write to their MPs to highlight the importance of policies which support the development of the equestrian sector and protect the health and welfare of all horses in the UK. Supported by the All-Party Parliamentary Group for The Horse, The British Horse Industry Confederation and the Steering Group of Britain's Equine Sector Council (of which the BHS is a member) have jointly produced a Manifesto for The Horse. It summarises in three succinct sections the action that these groups and the members they represent are seeking from Parliamentarians.

As a supporter of The British Horse Society we know that you love and value horses and want them to gain the appreciation and recognition they deserve. You already appreciate the very significant impact that the UK's £7 billion equine industry has on rural economies, trade, sport, jobs, culture, society and health.

By writing to your MP you can help to put horses at the top of the agenda for the 2015 General Election. You can make your MP aware of the issues facing the equine industry and the actions that need to be taken to enhance the health and welfare of one million horses, ponies and donkeys in the UK, increase access to the benefits of riding for all and support equine-related trade and businesses.

Below are links to download a template letter you can personalise and send together with a copy of the Manifesto for The Horse to your current MP. You can find their details on parliament.uk.

The greater the volume of correspondence your MP receives referencing the Manifesto of The Horse, the higher the priority it will be given. So why not encourage your friends and family to write as well and make sure your MP understands the value our horses bring to the lives of so many individuals?

Yours sincerely

Lynn Petersen
Chief Executive

Warning To Horse Owners Who Shop On-Line

Lincolnshire Police has made Thames Valley Police aware of an ongoing investigation they're running into a number of offences of online fraud. All of the incidents have involved an individual approaching members of online sites who are asking for saddles for sale.

This individual offers a variety of saddles for very cheap prices using stolen photographs, and insists that buyers transfer money directly into an account, refusing to use PayPal. A false or incorrect parcel tracking number is sent to the victim as proof of delivery so that they feel more comfortable in sending the payment. The parcel then never arrives and contact is cut between the offender and the victim.

Lincolnshire Police have so far spoken to six victims from all over the country, and the fraud has been committed on various different websites. The offender is still actively trying to commit these offences; until they are apprehended they will likely continue to do so.

Follow these simple online safety tips: -

- Avoid paying for goods by money transfers - they aren't secure.
- Be careful when using direct banking transactions to pay for goods. Make sure transactions are secure.
- Never send confidential personal or financial information by email.
- Use an online payment option such as PayPal whenever possible; it will help to protect you.

19th February 2015

If you suspect that you have become a victim of fraud, contact Action Fraud on 0300 123 2040

2. Rise in Dog Thefts in the South East?

Some of our members will be aware of an article that has appeared in the latest edition of 'Modern gamekeeping' entitled 'Gundogs are the new scrap metal'. Those wishing to view the article in full can find it by clicking the link below. I have added the text to the message for those wishing to view it here. Please note, the dogs mentioned in this article have NOT been stolen from within the Thames Valley Police area:-

19th February 2015

www.moderngamekeeping.com/news/gundogs-are-the-new-scrap-metal

Thieves are targeting working dogs in increasing numbers after new legislation blocked cash payments for scrap metal.

Thefts of working English Springer Spaniels, Cockers and Labradors have rocketed since changes to the Scrap Metal Dealers Act 1964 made it a criminal offence to pay cash for scrap metal from 3 December 2012.

Recent cases include the double theft of working dogs from Lynchmere Kennels near Chichester in Sussex. Two Springers and a Cocker were stolen on the morning of Friday 11 January. Thieves returned the following Monday night and took three terriers and another cocker spaniel. Sussex Police teamed up with colleagues in Hampshire amid fears it was the work of an organised gang.

Sergeant Jon Chapman of Chichester District Neighbourhood Policing Team told reporters: We have been working closely with Hampshire Constabulary following a spate of similar dog thefts in Hampshire and are following a number of lines of enquiry which I am unable to discuss any further at this stage.

Just days earlier Hampshire Police had warned of an organised gang targeting working dogs after Cocker Spaniels Tia and Maisie were taken from kennels near Winchester at around 3am on 31 December. Thieves had already been active in the area, stealing a six-year-old black-and-white Cocker named Jarvis, estimated to be worth £1,500, from kennels in Bullington the previous night. That followed the theft of two English Springers in Holbury, and another dog held to ransom for a week in Thornhill.

Working to recover Tia and Maisie was Colin Butcher, a former Surrey Police detective inspector who three years ago set up Pet Detectives, a specialist investigations agency based in Surrey.

Modern Gamekeeping spoke to Colin as he prepared to enter a gypsy site near Southampton in search of Tia and Maisie. Much of his work involves gypsies, but he has also dealt with cases where dogs were taken by a jilted lover or sacked employee. He says it has taken up to 18 months to recover a working dog; some are never found.

Colin says that the tightening of scrap metal regulations may be a factor, but the gypsy community have been involved in dog theft for decades, and I've been recovering dogs from gypsy sites for a long time. What's unusual now is that they are going missing at this time of year, as the shooting season is coming to an end. Clearly they are going into breeding or reselling.

He suspects a new market may be emerging for stolen gundogs in the Eastern Bloc. There's a rise in shooting and an absence of really good dogs over there. At the moment it's just rumours and unsubstantiated evidence, but there is one guy in particular that we are keeping an eye on.

Colin says he can sometimes gain access to sites by working with the local council liaison officer. We'll walk around and every dog that doesn't look as if it belongs, we scan it for the microchip. We can speak to the microchip database while we're on site, and they'll give us the information if that dog is lost or stolen. If that's the case we will recover it.

Some often feel that the police avoid confrontation, and fail to take action even when the legal owner can identify stolen dogs or property. Colin says that, in his experience, the police attitude varies. Sometimes it's just lack of time. They have a lot of different incidents to deal with. We've had a lot of cooperation from some police forces, while others have been, frankly, crap. It can come down to whether the individual police officer is an animal lover or not. If they love animals, they seem to find the time.

Colin always tries to go to the police with hard information that they can do something with. Where he can't get on to a gypsy site openly, he may employ covert surveillance techniques, or even enter the site secretly. He recently got onto a site and photographed a brown Cocker Spaniel secured with a chain and padlock, getting close enough to scan it for a microchip although sadly that dog was not chipped.

I've been around working dogs most of my life and I can tell when a dog is trained, says Colin. I know that cocker was a working dog, but we can't go taking dogs unless we can prove they belong to someone else, or we're as bad as the thieves themselves.

He warns against taking the law into your own hands, however, as one gamekeeper did over the Christmas break. That keeper recovered his stolen dogs, along with a quad bike and various tools but ended up with an airgun pellet embedded in his leg.

Colin works closely with gamekeepers, and says that dog theft can be the result of a shooting estate lowering its guard. You let someone on to do a bit of ferreting or beating. Sadly, they speak to their family and the next generation come along and they don't have the same sort of agreements with the landowners.

A spokesman for the National Gamekeepers' Organisation said: Gamekeepers are no strangers to dog theft. All too many keepers have to contend with the havoc left behind by criminals operating in rural areas. Gamekeepers are diligent in taking steps to ensure that their dogs are kept as safe and secure as it is humanely possible for them to be, but it is nevertheless important that keepers continually review their security arrangements to meet any new, potential threats.

Often stolen dogs will be used for breeding, and typically a dog will be sold on to a site that specialises in that breed of dog. For example, we know of a site in Essex where they breed black labs and Yorkshire terriers, says Colin. In the north of England, at the moment they are tending to specialise in the toy breeds. When a dog is no longer any use for breeding, the breeder will often just release it into the countryside. That could be months or even years after it was stolen, but if it's micro-chipped there's an excellent chance it will be reunited with its owner.

That's the hope of Dawn Maw, whose four-and-a-half-year-old GSP bitch Angel went missing on 6 December during her morning walk near her home in Barnsley, South Yorkshire. Angel had won a field trial award the previous week, making her one of only two GSPs in the country to qualify as a 'full champion' for her success in both showing and working.

Since then Dawn has worked tirelessly to find Angel, offering a £3,000 reward, initiating a Facebook campaign, arranging for 15,000 posters to be put up, and contacting every vet and dog rescue in the country. She has visited traveller sites to no avail. They were a bit frosty initially, but I was diplomatic and said perhaps their kids might have found Angel wandering around, Dawn says. Now when I visit I'm offered a cup of tea, but I'm no nearer to finding Angel.

Dawn responded to several potential sightings and was disappointed when they turned out to be other dogs, but says it just makes her more determined. I would never have parted with Angel. It's impossible to put a value on her, but I have certainly spent £10,000 getting her to this stage. Dawn continues her campaign, and has also been in touch with Colin at Pet Detectives, who is following various lines of enquiry, including the possibility Angel might have been taken by someone with a grudge against her owner.
